

Deferred Action for DREAMers Education Qualification Resource Guide

The new ‘Deferred Action’ immigration policy announced on June 15, 2012 by President Obama provides an opportunity for some young undocumented people to obtain U.S. work permits and avoid deportation, at least temporarily. In order to meet the criteria for this policy, individuals must be enrolled in school, have completed high school, or have attained a GED (General Education Development) certificate.¹ There are, of course, other requirements that must be met (explained here) but, in addition to establishing those requirements, you will also need to gather documentation that shows that you completed high school, obtained a GED, or are currently enrolled in school.

If you are not currently enrolled in school, have not graduated from high school and have not obtained a GED certificate, you are not currently eligible to apply for deferred action even if you meet other criteria. However, it is expected that individuals who can meet the education requirement at a later point will be able to apply once they meet the criteria. You can, therefore, pursue a GED certificate now and apply for deferred action once you obtain the certificate (again, assuming you meet the other criteria for the policy).

Please note that many questions about this program are still up in the air and we expect that the government will provide additional guidance in the coming weeks. As a reminder, there is as of yet no process for individuals who are not in deportation proceedings to apply for this program. We urge you to monitor our website for additional information and for updates, and we urge you to speak to an attorney or qualified legal services provider before pursuing an application under this program once the process is announced.

Requesting School Records

If you attended and/or graduated from a Washington State public high school you must request those records from the school district which you attended (WA school districts and contact information listed below). Please note that, in addition to establishing that you are either currently in school or have completed high school, you will also need to show that you have been residing in the U.S. for five years prior to June 15, 2012. We therefore recommend that you request records at least as far back as 2007.

If you have received a GED, you can request your transcript by contacting your local testing center (list of certified WA testing centers listed below) or through the Washington State Board of Community and Technical Colleges at this site.

Acquiring a GED

A GED is a 5 subject exam which, if passed, certifies that you have the same content understanding as a High School graduate and serves as the equivalent of a High School diploma.

You are eligible to take the Washington State GED Exam if you fit one of the six following categories:

1. You cannot be younger than 16 years old.
2. You are 19 years old or older and are not currently enrolled in a public or private high school program and have not graduated from high school or;
3. If you are 16 through 18 years old, are not currently enrolled in a public or private program, and you have officially dropped out of high school.

Continue reading on the next page...

¹ The policy would also allow individuals to qualify if they have been honorably discharged from the military but undocumented individuals are not eligible to join the armed forces, so it is anticipated that very few if any individuals will be able to qualify this way.

4. You are 16 through 18 years old and have completed a home-schooling program
5. If you are an active member of the military, national guard, or reserves.
6. You are currently in a juvenile detention center.

Testing Requirements:

1. Current government-issued picture identification that has your name, address, birth date, and signature on it.
2. $75 testing fee.
3. Completed High School Release form or notarized statement of completion of home-schooling program.

Can I Take the GED Exam Online?

No. You cannot take the GED online, only the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges and the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of Washington administer and issue the GED. Certified GED Testing Centers are listed below.

Are there special accommodations for people with disabilities?

Yes. There are various accommodations for the GED that can be requested, click here for further information.

Can I take the exam in another language?

Yes. Currently, Washington State administers the test in three languages: English, Spanish, and French.

How do I prepare to take the GED?

The Washington State Board for Community and Technical Colleges offers a list of resource. Literacy Source also offers classes, tutoring, and test preparation.
